ROSINE de BOUNEVIALLE shows how the new ECU is based on an old bankers' trick

THERE is a novel by Georgette Heyer that vignettes what might otherwise be a totally forgotten piece of history. It is set in the nineteenth century and tells of a robbery of "the most perilous treasure ever known." The thieves, therefore, had to pre-arrange safe custody for it until it should be possible to spend it with impunity; for the ingenious tale turns on the peculiar nature of the newly minted coins that composed the target.

It appears that the government of that day, in a delicate and secret operation, was about to replace the abolished gold guinea with an innovation to be called the sovereign. Still a coin, still gold, but valued at twenty shillings instead of the guinea's twenty-one. The robbery is successfully accomplished during the first consignment's journey from Mint to Bank.

As the story was written in the early 1950s, it is probable that the author had based her plot on what she considered a unique historical quirk. However, a reader in the later 1970s might well have recognised in his contemporary government's metric contrick an adaption of the age-old scenario reiterated in The Tollgate.

Whenever the lords of loan-creation find it expedient to de-stabilise an established means of exchange, they take care to disguise their purpose and to delay public recognition of the consequences for as long as they can. The success of their tactics depends upon the efficiency of the political and journalistic tools employed. So far, they seem to have gauged the necessity for subtlety to a nicety. When the anaesthetised public recovers its senses, the pain of the latest amputation is past and forgotten in some artificially induced euphoria.

The guinea was brought into existence at the instance of King Charles II with a value of twenty shillings, and never went anywhere but up until it reached thirty shillings in that significant year 1694, when the usurious Bank of England - pregnant with its monstrous offspring, the National Debt - came into being. By 1698, the guinea was back to twenty-one shillings, and was abolished in 1717. Like its inaugurator, it was "an unconscionable time a-dying," and so had to be killed off. Its successor proved equally difficult to dislodge; it took half-a-dozen Continental and one World War to do it. Thence things were easier.

Gold gave way to paper promissory notes to pay in more (and cheaper) paper. We were left with silver coinage - shrinking silver. Who can remember a five shilling piece being legal tender? Another world war, and silver gave way to cupro-nickel. With the disappearance of the silver threepenny bit and of the half-five shilling piece, the death of the English coinage and currency was only a matter of time. Like the guinea before them, have gone the sixpence, the wieldy penny, the halfpenny, the farthing, and lastly the shilling. One can only suppose that the imminence of the ECU has made the redundancy of the two-shilling piece with its pseudonym "tenpence" unnecessary.

The only difference between the loss of our effective monarchy in the seventeenth century and the palpable surrender of our puppet monarchy in the twentieth century, is that the one was followed by the establishment of our alien rulers in a so-called national bank, whilst the other will be followed by the establishment of the same alien rulers in a veritable international bank in a land other than our own.

The ECU is England's death certificate. It awaits only the doctor's signature and we shall be living in a mausoleum, for our country will be legally buried alive. Surely it is time to sack the doctor and try homeopathic medicine.

EUROPE'S NEW UNHAPPY LORD

KENNETH MCKILLIAM asks what sort of man has become President of the Euro-Bank

JACQUES Attali has been appointed President of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development with an eventual capital of ten billion ECUs supplied by forty shareholder nations. It is to be a central tool in shaping a new political and economic world order. Attali stated in a recent speech in Washington that the Euro-Bank is not a bank in its narrow sense at all. It is a political institution which might become a front-runner institution for a federal Europe in the same way the European Coal and Steel Community came before the E.C. Interestingly, it was Mrs Thatcher who pressed for this Trojan horse to be based in London.

So who is Jacques Atali? He is a member of the French Socialist Party and an advisor to President Mitterand. In his book Sir Sygmond C. Warburg, published by Fayard in Paris in 1985, he wrote:

"In the last two centuries the man whose influence is least in doubt, less even than the artist or the industrialist, is the financier, the man involved, directly or indirectly, in financing the princes of the world. Like the priest or the warrior in earlier times, he speculates on future developments in affairs and powers and tries to influence them in the direction that suits his own desires. He supplies men of ambition with the material means they need for the achievement of their hopes and in order to be sure of being repaid what is due to him, he tries to forecast what the state of the world will be at the moment when he expects to recover the money he has lent....

"Some will be, no doubt, surprised to see the emergence here, into the front ranks of history in the narrow gaps left between the play of popular forces and arbitrary actions of tyrants, a whole galaxy of barely known people of great talent and strong character, almost always very rich, not always morally admirable, in all cases linked together in a tight almost dynastic network, a parallel aristocracy implanted at the heart of every regime. And they will be surprised to discover that the Warburgs, Rothschilds, Schiffs, Lehmans, Melchiors, Hambros and Mayers have played just as important a role in our destination, for better or worse, as the princes and politicians....

"Sometimes in public view (and always attacked when they are) but more generally behind the scenes, they are in a sense the doubles of the men of power whom they advise, almost always better informed than the latter about what is going on in the world, and at the same time guardians of the communities from which they spring. Held at arm's length by the visible upper crust, extremely refined and highly ambitious, they finally organise themselves into a strange alternate aristocracy, a sort of austere religious order with its own implacable moral laws and ruthless rituals, whose essential wealth lies in its name, and whose ultimate vanity is the earth."

From these people come the Bilderbergers, Club of Rome, Trilateral Commission and other manipulators of international policy.

SEEING THROUGH GLASNOST

THE BIGGEST AND BRIGHTEST "STRATEGY OF SMILES" IN HISTORY

On April 26, 1986, in Chernobyl, Russia, the worst nuclear power plant disaster in history occurred. The leader of the Soviet Union, Mikhail Gorbachev, as unbelievable as it sounds, tried to keep the accident a secret. He himself refused to speak of it for 18 hours. By doing so, he knowingly and willingly endangered the lives of thousands of his own Soviet citizens and allowed clouds of radiation to descend upon unsuspecting Eastern and Western Europeans. The world then looked upon Gorbachev as a master polluter.

On August 30th of the same year, under the same Mikhail Gorbachev, US News and World Report correspondent Nicholas Daniloff was arrested: a crude and obvious manoeuvre of kidnap and hostage designed to blackmail the United States into the successful swapping of Daniloff for arrested Soviet spy Gennadi Zakharov. The media then viewed Gorbachev as an international thug.

On October 11-12 in the same year, Gorbachev threw a high-tech monkey wrench into the Reykjavic arms control summit insisting that unless the United States did away with its space centred "Strategic Defence Initiative", no arms control agreement could be reached. Public opinion then held him as the enemy of peace and the destroyer of summits. The "Evil Empire" seemed to be as evil as ever.

And yet, today Soviet Premier Gorbachev, due to an unprecedented media blitz campaign of handshakes, smiles, "electrifying overtures and unheard-of concessions", is not only regarded as the great dove of peace bearing the olive branches of Glasnost and Perestroika in his Soviet beak, but as a "different sort of Communist", a man with a "new vision" for the Soviet Union, whose good will and sincerity to live in peace and prosperity with the West is absolutely beyond question. A man whom a number of recent European opinion polls ranked higher in popularity than former President Ronald Reagan. And to complete the paradox, those who criticize Gorbachev, or voice the slightest noise of distrust at his present love affair with the West are now the ones looked upon as the enemies of peace. They are viewed as pathetic ultra-conservative reactionaries suffering from a chronic and incurable spell of "McCarthyism" ... possibly deserving pity, but certainly undeserving of any serious consideration. In short, it is chic to be "pro-Gorbachev."

Even the Elect

Even good people who have been "anti-communist" all their lives are now hesitantly looking at Gorbachev as "the great red hope", a warm and soothing sunbeam of gentleness and civilized diplomacy in the midst of the Siberian iceberg of Bolchevism, whose charismatic combustion and contagious radiation seems to be slowly but surely melting the communist ice. The life-long anti-communists do not want to trust him, but recent unprecedented and highly publicized developments within a choice portion of the Communist world seem to leave them with absolutely no alternative but reluctantly to place their trust in his "peace initiative". After all, it seems to make sense! "Why" the average man on the street asks himself "would the communists allow such a state of affairs as the apparent cave-in within the countries of Poland, Hungary, East Germany and others? Why would such a giant step backwards be tolerated, apparently undoing years of meticulous planning and careful strategy in obtaining and retaining power within the countries they have enslaved? Why would the Iron Curtain countries allow their citizens such a dangerous and intoxicating taste of the wine of freedom when it would seem to be an irreparable blow to their declared (and up to now, successful) plan of world domination?

Our man in the street is simply deluged with a veritable tidal wave of optimism and realistic hope. The Communism of Eastern Europe is portrayed as a crumbling edifice. The media-induced public mania lays palms before Gorbachev's triumphant entry into the West with shouts of "Hosanna, blessed is he who comes in the name of Glasnost". It would seem completely logical and beyond dispute that the winds of change and reform are truly blowing through the Communist world. It is considered altogether outside the bounds of possibility that these winds of change would only be artificial gusts generated by the great Soviet dialectic wind machine. The breakdown of "Evil Empire" must be for real, otherwise why would it be allowed to happen? As the old phrase goes "seeing is believing"... or is it?

The earth is flat?

According to what we see, the earth is flat, stationary and motionless (we don't feel it moving, do we?) According to what we see, the sun revolves around the earth. Based on his observations, these are the conclusions to which the average "man on the street" would arrive - the conclusions held by mankind for centuries. Logical perhaps, but completely erroneous. It is only when the principles of our solar system of nine planets revolving around the sun are scientifically explained do we come to the true knowledge of the behaviour of the Sun, earth and planets. So too, those who know nothing of the philosophy and tactics of Communism, and judge it merely on the flat surface of what they see will likewise come to the logical but erroneous conclusion that at last the great warship of communism is finally sailing off the edge of the earth.

My people perish for lack of knowledge

Perhaps part of the reason there is such a ready flip-flop in public opinion concerning Communism is that most Americans are only sentimentally anti-communist. In other words, they are anti-communist without really knowing why. Lacking a firm foundation, their opposition to Communism has degenerated into a shallow sentiment possibly inherited from their parents or absorbed from surrounding society. A firm knowledge of the philosophy and strategy of Communism is usually completely lacking. For decades it has been the "proper" American attitude that "to be pro-American means to be anti-Communist, and to be pro-Communist means to be anti-American", and more often than not, philosophically, that's about as deep as it gets. It is merely looked upon as a different "political" or "economic" atheistic system which somehow oppresses its citizens and restricts men's freedom. The average man on the street will be unable to answer the "how" and "why" of this. He only knows that America is supposedly for freedom, and for some reason or another, Communism isn't.

The truth, however, is that Communism is much more than an alternative school of politics or economics. It is actually a pseudo-religious humanistic philosophy, a bizarre "religion without God" with deeply rooted tenets on the very nature of man and the "inevitable" destiny of the entire world. All actions of Communism spring from this ideology. It is the philosophy of Communism which spawns its politics and economics, and not the other way round. It is of the utmost importance to realize that all through the present period of Glasnost, the rulers of Communism have not given the slightest indication that they have abandoned their Marxist-Leninist ideology. On the contrary, Mikhail Gorbachev publicly stated in October 1987: "We are moving towards a new world, the world of Communism. We shall never turn off that road." Glasnost and Perestroika merely represent a Madison Avenue style change in the packaging of Communism without a corresponding change in the ideology.

Communism, the philosophy of a madman.

Today's Communism is the atheistic philosophy of Karl Marx coupled with the strategy and satanic revolutionary genius of Vladimir Lenin - hence the name "Marxism-Leninism". Marx drew the diagram, Lenin drew the battle plan. The chief tenets of the Communist philosophy are as follows:

- (1) There is no God. Man has no immortal soul - no supernatural life whatsoever. Man is purely material. The only reality is matter.
- (2) Man and the entire universe are a freak accident of the powerful forces of nature... the product of a blind evolution.
- (3) The development of this evolution is dialectic. In other words, evolution is the product of the conflict of the blind powerful forces of nature.
- (4) Not only man, but human society is in a constant state of evolution.
- (5) Through a perpetual conflict of forces, the final product of this blind evolution is the utopia of the completely classless society, where all men are absolutely equal.
- (6) It is possible to accelerate this evolution of human society by sharpening the antagonisms which arise between various social classes so as to bring about this utopia as quickly as possible.
- (7) The greatest duty of man, therefore, is to zealously dedicate himself to bringing about this utopian "classless society" as rapidly as possible through the promotion of conflict and "class-struggle".
- (8) Anything whatsoever which promotes this "revolution" is considered good and moral. Anything which resists or stands in the way of the "revolution" is evil and must be annihilated as hostile to the human race.

Communism, therefore, teaches that man has no natural rights. He is merely a cog in the Communist machine. There is absolute equality between man and man, so therefore all authority is rejected, even the authority of parents. No property rights exist, so property must be done away with. Marriage is looked upon as an artificial and civil agreement between man and woman, and there is no marriage bond which cannot be broken by the whim of the individual or Communist Society. Woman is "emancipated" by being forced out of the home to take her "rightful" place in the industrial world. Parents have no rights over their children, but the care of home and children, as well as the education of children belong "solely and properly" to the State.

Since "there is no God", religion must be erased from the minds of men. Lenin himself stated: "thousands of epidemics and natural catastrophes are to be preferred to the slightest notion of God... we have to fight religion, this is the ABC of all materialism and thus also of Marxism."

In Communist society, there would be no other order than the economic, no values but economic values; its sole object would be the production of material things by means of collective labour. Labour, then, is drafted for the State, without regard to the personal welfare of the individual. Force and oppression are the so-called messianic tools which are said to be a "temporary necessity" in order to condition the entire world to a "collective mentality" (the utopian end result of society's evolution, remember?) Once this is achieved, the State will have no reason to exist and will simply "whither away". But in the meantime, Communism will use the forces of the State, and whatever means necessary to arrive at its goal of the ultimate classless society.

Such then are the demonic principles of Communism which in no way have been repudiated by any Communist regime to the present day, even amidst the so-called "Reform" of the Communist world. Again, Mr. Gorbachev has already hinted that this "new era" is merely a new strategy. He stated that the control of the Communist party remains "unshakable", and insists "the point at issue is not any break-up of our political system." Over 35 years ago, Archbishop Fulton J. Sheen pointed out that the Communists often use a "strategy of smiles", followed by broken promises and barbaric military aggression. All students of Communism are aware of this. It is obvious that today's Glasnost is simply the "biggest and brightest" strategy of smiles in history. What the Communists have successfully applied in individual countries, they are now applying to the entire world.

The strategy of "Two steps forward, one step backwards"

Consider two common tools, the screwdriver and the hammer. A screwdriver keeps pushing and turning the screw into the wood until it is completely driven in, but a hammer does not. It is necessary to swing the hammer forward to strike the nail, and then backwards to prepare for the next blow.

Most people expect the Communist to act like a screwdriver, continually twisting and thrusting forward until they have realized their objective. But the Communist strategy is not like the screwdriver, but like the hammer - a constant forwards and backwards motion - a seemingly endless series of advances and retreats. As the backward swing moves the hammer away from the nail, so too the communists often approach their object by moving away from it - by seemingly going in the opposite direction. But it is obvious that the backward motion of the hammer is as essential to the advancing of the nail as is the forward thrust.

This vital strategy, of which the average Western man has no concept, is the principle of "Two steps forward, one step backwards." Lenin himself wrote the text book Two Steps Forward, One Step Back. Chinese schoolchildren are taught to do the dialectic march of three steps forward and two steps backward. The point is that the Communist goal is fixed and changeless - it never alters one iota from their objective of world domination, but if we judge them only by the direction in which they seem to be going, we shall be deceived.

Communist aggression followed by peace talks and conciliatory gestures is merely the principle of the dialectic in operation - war and terrorism followed by overtures of peaceful co-existence and concessions. The concessions or "good will gestures", however, will never be made unless they are meticulously calculated ultimately to further the advancement of Communism at a later date. One example among many is the "military aid" of soldiers and tanks that were shipped to Afghanistan as a "gift" during the 1970s' period of "peaceful co-existence". These are the same tanks and soldiers that were then used in the barbaric surprise attack against the Afghans on December 27, 1980, in which the President as well as 17,000 Afghanistan citizens were slain in a single evening. The military strike would not have been possible without the essential groundwork prepared by "peaceful co-existence."

The Great Glasnost Backstep

Communism is like a sailing boat. Sailing boats do not fight the wind, but take advantage of the prevailing gusts in order to advance. We may ask ourselves then, is there presently a condition within the Soviet Union which makes the winds favourable for the Communist to present himself to the world as a bosom buddy instead of a military bully?

In his article Communism at the end of the Brezhnev era, the world's most eminent Soviet dissident, Alexander Solzhenitsyn, painted a bleak picture of the economic catastrophe and crisis within the Soviet Union. The military centred economy is in shambles: the citizens are beset with shortages and kept hungry so that they may be completely dependent on the Government. Unsanitary conditions are widespread, the ruthless destruction and pollution of the environment is "government policy" for the sake of military production, alcoholism is rampant among men and women resulting in a high death rate among the young. Communism is a poisonous ideology which simply does not work. The Russian dissident Anatoly Koryagin explained that "Perestroika is a long range political strategy of the Politburo, born of the necessity to find a way out of the crisis in which the Soviet sociopolitical system and the country's economy find themselves today."

GLASNOST AND PERESTROIKA, THEN, SERVE TWO PURPOSES THAT MAY ULTIMATELY BE THE SALVATION OF COMMUNISM AND PERHAPS THE DEATH KNEEL OF THE FREE WORLD.

(1) The West will save the Communist world from economic crisis.

Due to the so-called "democracy" now sweeping through Poland, the Polish government has obtained millions in financial aid from the West, something that would not have been possible without the "victory of Solidarity". This fake "democracy" will result in even more economic aid and financial investment to Communist nations. There will be no ultimatum given to Iron curtain countries that monies will come only on condition that the Communists depart first. The West will invest in Communism as is, a Communism temporarily wrapped in a thin and disposable veil of "democratic reform". It is an economic blood transfusion to the Communist empire. Lenin correctly predicted that we would sell him the rope with which he would hang us.

(2) It neutralizes the West into thinking that Communism is no longer an enemy.

There is no better way for a man to be knifed in the back than when he is being hugged. This is exactly what the Communists have said they would do. Sixty years ago, Dimitri Manuilevsky openly revealed this strategy when he stated: "Today of course we are not strong enough to attack. To win we shall need the element of surprise. The Bourgeoisie will have to be put to sleep. So we shall begin by launching the most spectacular peace movement of record. There will be electrifying overtures and unheard of concessions. The Capitalist countries, stupid and decadent, will rejoice to co-operate in their own destruction. They will jump at the chance to be friends. As soon as their guard is down, we shall smash them with our clenched fist... War to the hilt between Communism and Capitalism is inevitable." We are now witnessing these "electrifying overtures" and "unheard of concessions" in progress.

So:

When it is said that "free enterprise" is now permitted in the Soviet Union ... know that in the early 1920s Lenin initiated a "New Economic Policy [NEP] allowing limited private enterprises in order to stimulate the failing economy. This was later crushed by Joseph Stalin in 1927, and the "NEP counter-revolutionaries" were either dead or banished to Siberia by the mid 1930s.

When it is said that Poland now has a "non-communist" government... Know that the Communists are still in full control of both the military and the police.

When Gorbachev is praised for criticizing the "Brezhnev era"... Know that in the 1950s, Khrushchev criticized the "crimes of Stalin", and the West mistranslated this as a "new era for the Soviet Union". Know also that Gorbachev has never criticized Marx or Lenin whose unholy spirits he proudly carries on.

When the news media celebrates the so-called "collapse of Communist Europe"... Know that in the 1950s, the same "infallible" news media hailed Fidel Castro as the great romantic hero, liberator and the "George Washington" of Cuba. Castro could not have come to power without the praise of the media.

When the Soviet Premier is praised for his warmth and grand smile... Know that the bloody dictator Stalin (responsible for the murder of over 20 million innocents) made a great "positive" impression on Western rulers. One diplomat commented: "His brown eyes are exceedingly wise and gentle. A child would like to sit on his lap." Know also that Andrei Gromyko has said that Gorbachev "has a nice smile, but has teeth of iron."

When the news media reports that the Communist world is changing for the better... Know that the same media simply chose not to report the June 25, 1989 Digos Massacre in the Philippines where the Communist "New Peoples Army" savagely slaughtered a jungle church full of men, women and children including pregnant women and two one-year-olds. Also, there is still no shortage of reports of "business as usual" Communist atrocities within their countries, reports ignored by the news media.

When the world celebrates the collapse of the Berlin wall... know that the more formidable wall of Marxism-Leninism still stands strong and proud in the minds of Communist leaders.

When the world hails Gorbachev as the huggable teddy-bear of peace... know that this is the same Gorbachev who still supplies terrorists to Africa and arms to the Nicaraguan Sandinistas.

When it is said that we should now cut back drastically on defence because "the cold war is over... know that Vladimir Kryuchokov, Chief of the Soviet KGB, announced that the Soviets are about to do just the opposite. On November 4, 1989, to a huge audience at the Kremlin he stated: "In military affairs, renewal, perestroika, and modernization of Soviet technology under the new economic thinking and more open East-West trade will help increase the military might of our country so that continual readiness can be assured. Our armed forces will be spared nothing in order to guarantee their strength."

When it is said that we are witnessing the birth of a new and harmless form of Communism... know that this is as ludicrous as describing cancer in remission as harmless and non-threatening tissue. Communism is satanic, an intrinsically evil system that cannot be anything else than what it is, no matter how attractively it seems to be packaged - as Solzhenitsyn expressed it: "To improve or correct Communism is not feasible. Communism can only be done away with."

Rendering unto Glasnost the things that are Mary's

No treatment of the satanic scourge of Communism is complete without eventually speaking of Our Lady of Fatima. Discussing Communism with no reference to Fatima is like discussing the great Flood with no reference to Noah's Ark. Before the Russian revolution ever took place, Our Lady at Fatima warned the world that "Russia will be the instrument chosen by God to punish the world for its crimes." She also told us why we would be scourged: "Man must cease offending God." She gave us a remedy for these great evils, but man has refused to listen.

Unfortunately, in spite of the dramatic message of Our Lady of Fatima, there are many well-meaning people who ignore Her and oppose Communism with weapons that are purely naturalistic. It is believed that "military superiority" or being "well-informed on the evils of Communism" will be adequate to keep it from conquering us. However, Our Lady did not say "build bombs to battle the Bolchevicks", nor did She say "educate the masses on the menace of Marxism." She simply said, "Man must cease offending God." Knowledge of and defence against Communism are certainly necessary, but these by themselves are not the answer. Until it is fully understood that Communism is no mere human ideology, but a satanic scourge that God is allowing to spread in order to punish mankind for its sins, there will be no hope of eradicating it. Relying on Glasnost or democracy to bring an end to Communism is like calling a medical doctor to perform an exorcism. The enemy is demonic: the only remedy is supernatural.

ANOTHER REASON FOR WAR? - "John Casey overlooks the real Gulf issue. It is not aggression, many other examples of invasion, of course, having gone unpunished since 1945. Nor oil, the prices of which were negotiable and the supplies of which will anyhow dwindle during military conflict. Half a century ago the German dictator, Adolf Hitler, sought to create an 'Aryan empire' which directly endangered the East European Jews. The British were therefore ready to destroy that fanatical regime by war. Today the Iraqi dictator, Saddam Hussein, seeks to create an 'Arab nation' that likewise threatens the Middle Eastern Jews. The western democracies should be no less willing to battle against this fanatical regime. Anti-semitism is the supreme modern political evil, and it provides the necessary and sufficient moral argument for a successful all-out battle to destroy the Baghdad butchers as it did the Berlin butchers." [Letter by Mr Sigmund Cassell in The Sunday Telegraph, 6th January, 1991]

NICE CHAMPIONS AGAINST AIDS - World AIDS Day in the London borough of Camden was marked by a conference on "Women and HIV Prevention." A very glossy and expensive poster advertising the event (most likely paid for by the local poll tax payers) listed the organisations represented by speakers. Fourth in line was a person from the quaintly-named English Collective of Prostitutes!

EUROPE'S EVER-OPEN DOOR

PAUL NASH considers how refugee status is used as a route for mass immigration

1992 will soon be with us. One of the results of the disappearance of barriers within Europe will be the ability of E.C. residents to travel freely within and also settle in other countries of the 'Community'. Every European country has substantial pockets of non-European inhabitants. The Arabs of France, the Turks of Germany and the Indonesians of the Netherlands will be able to come here by right and we won't have even our meagre immigration laws to help us.

There is a fantasy being peddled by the political Left that 1992 will lead to 'Fortress Europe', wherein Europe will make life very difficult for the non-Europeans and exercise considerable discrimination against them. The truth, of course, is very different and the Left is just preparing the ground to be the advance party of the new improved multi-racial Europe. They will fight the test cases on immigration. They will organise the campaigns. The Establishment and the Left have always worked hand-in-hand, for they are both internationalist.

In the 1990s we will also have a steady stream of arrivals from Hong Kong and as the decade progresses this stream will become a flood. The giving of passports to the Chinese there will not stem the flood, as Government propaganda maintains, but make it easier for them to come here.

"Victims Of Persecution"

As if this were not serious enough, there is the refugee problem. London, in particular, is being inundated with refugees from despotic Third World regimes. To be able to stay, all they have to show is a well-proven fear of persecution. Not so long ago it was the Kurds who were pouring into Haringey, Hackney and Islington; now one of the major sources of refugees is Ethiopia. These latest arrivals are mainly Eritrean children who disembark at Gatwick or Heathrow on their own, or accompanied by adults who quickly vanish. The London Boroughs Association has called for a tightening up of airline procedures to stop parents in Africa putting unaccompanied children on flights to London.

At present there are 160 children from Ethiopia alone being looked after by London boroughs. Thirty six are being cared for by Camden Council at a cost of £500,000 a year. This has led even Camden to plead for help - the loony-left 'flagship' that banned Roy of the Rovers as 'sexist' and campaigns regularly for 'gays' and lesbians. Along with other London councils, it wants more taxpayers' money to pay for the upkeep of the refugees.

1992, Hong Kong and the refugees are going to combine to make immigration a major issue in the 1990s. The increasing militancy of some Muslims will magnify the problem. The Establishment will not be able to give a non-committal answer to the immigration question as they did in the 1980s. Let us hope that the British people soon wake up - or this time it could really be too late.
